

CONTENT REPURPOSING · WORKED EXAMPLE

One Article. Five Platforms.

The same dental-implant guide — “Getting Dental Implants in Thailand” — rewritten natively for each channel, from a single source article. Same clinic, same expertise, a different shape for every audience.

01 Website

02 LinkedIn

03 Instagram

04 Guest article

05 Newsletter

Demonstration mockups produced by Bangkok Copy · clinic (Levana Dental) and author are illustrative.

levanadental.com/dental-implants/bangkok

DENTAL IMPLANTS IN BANGKOK

Getting Dental Implants in Thailand: The Complete Guide for International Patients

Last Updated: June 2026 · By Dr. Arthit Suwannarat, Implant Dentist

If you've priced dental implants at home and then seen Thailand's numbers, your first question isn't really about cost — it's whether work this much cheaper can possibly be this good. The honest answer: the dentistry can be excellent, performed by internationally trained specialists using the same implant systems your dentist at home would use.

The Two-Trip Reality: A dental implant isn't fitted in a single visit. After the post is placed, it needs three to six months to fuse to the bone before the crown goes on — so most cases mean two trips to Thailand, not one.

What separates a smooth result from a stressful one usually isn't the surgery at all. It's understanding how implant treatment is sequenced before you book your flights.

1 Online Consultation

2 Exam & 3D Scan

3 Implant Placement

4 Healing (Osseointegration)

5 Crown Fitting

6 Aftercare & Warranty

The hub article — built to rank on Google, answer every question, and be cited by AI search. Every other channel links back here.

02 · LINKEDIN — THE DENTIST'S VOICE

Dr. Arthit Suwannarat

Implant Dentist · Levana Dental, Bangkok

2h ·

In fifteen years placing implants for patients who fly in from overseas, I've learned the hardest part is rarely the surgery.

It's the calendar.

Almost every week, someone arrives expecting to land, get implants, and fly home a week later with a finished smile.

A dental implant can't be rushed. The titanium post has to fuse to your jawbone first — a process called osseointegration — and that takes three to six months. Only then can the permanent tooth go on.

For most patients, that means two short trips, months apart. Not one long one.

It sounds like bad news. It's the opposite. The healing happens at home, in your normal life — not in a Bangkok hotel.

Good implant dentistry respects biology. Anyone who tells you otherwise is selling you a deadline, not a tooth.

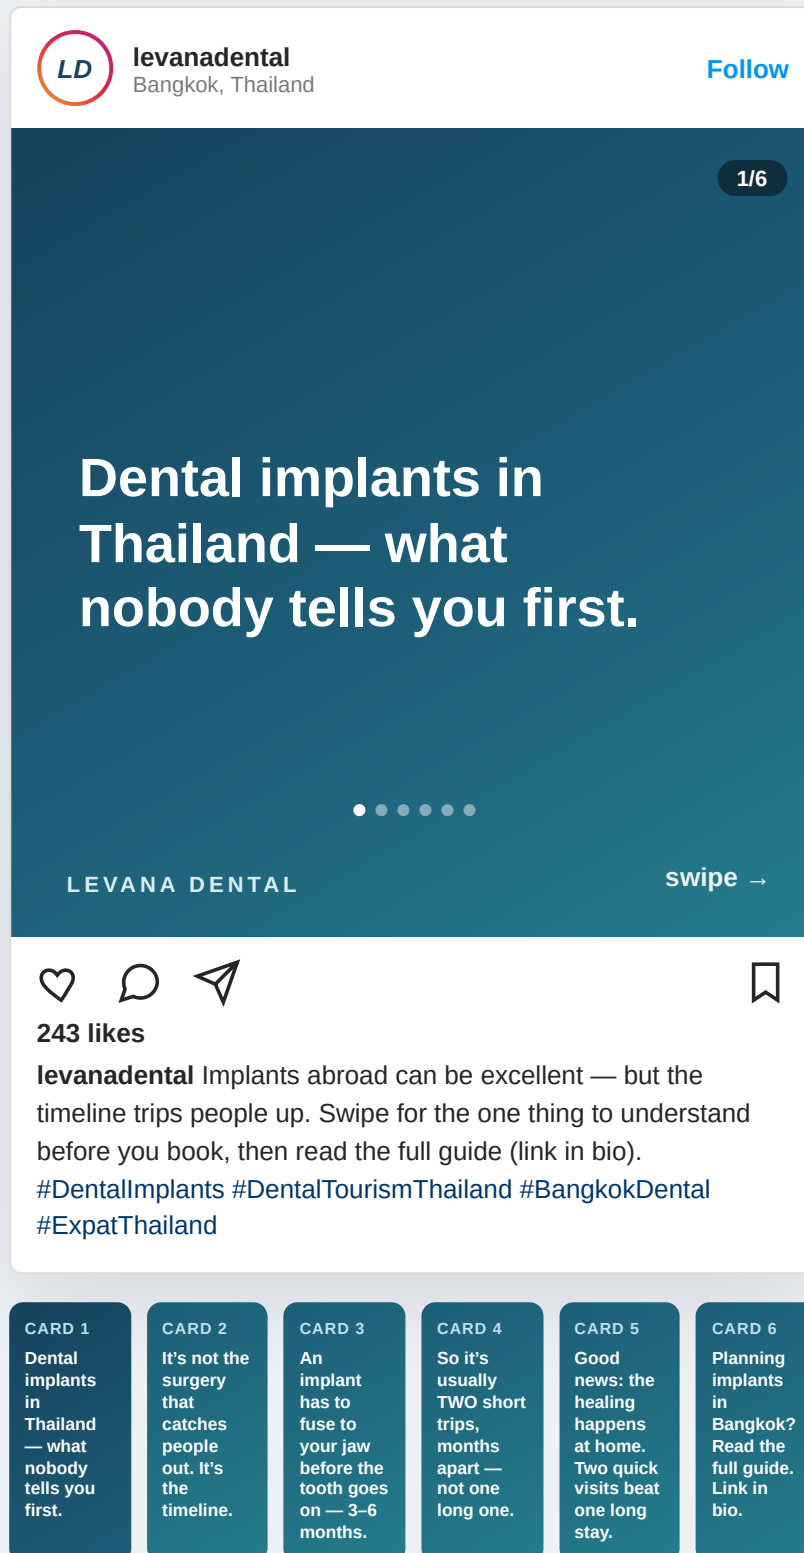

Full guide to planning your treatment in the comments.

#DentalImplants #DentalTourism #DentalTourismThailand #BangkokDentist

First-person dentist voice. One idea, told as a story. The guide link sits in the first comment to protect reach.

03 · INSTAGRAM — A SWIPEABLE CAROUSEL

Six cards, one idea per card — built for saves and shares, the metrics Instagram weights most. “Link in bio” routes back to the hub.

austchamthailand.com/resources/dental-implants-australiansAustCham·ThailandMembers · Events · Resources · News

MEMBER RESOURCES · DENTAL TOURISM

What Australians Should Know Before Flying to Bangkok for Dental Implants

By Dr. Arthit Suwannarat · Levana Dental · 5 min read

For Australians weighing the cost of dental implants at home, Thailand's prices are hard to ignore — often less than half, for work performed by internationally trained specialists using the same implant systems found in Sydney or Melbourne. The dentistry, at a reputable clinic, is genuinely world-class. What catches Australian patients off guard is rarely the quality. It's the scheduling.

A dental implant cannot be completed in a single visit. After the titanium post is placed, it must fuse to the jawbone — a healing period of three to six months — before the permanent crown is fitted. For most patients, that means two trips to Bangkok rather than one. The healing happens back home in Australia, so the second trip can be planned at leisure.

Continue reading →Dr. Arthit Suwannarat

Implant Dentist · Levana Dental, Bangkok · 15+ years treating international patients

Audience-matched for Australian readers. Less sell, more authority — and the author-bio backlink from a respected organisation is the SEO prize.

From: Levana Dental <hello@levanadental.com>

To: Patient List

Subject: The one thing about implants in Thailand nobody tells you first

LEVANA DENTAL

The one thing about implants in Thailand nobody tells you first

This month's guide answers the question almost every overseas patient asks: can I really get implants done in Thailand, safely, for a fraction of the price? The short answer is yes — by an internationally trained specialist, using the same implant brands as at home.

But there's one detail clinics chasing a quick sale tend to gloss over: an implant usually can't be finished in a single trip. We walk through the whole process in plain English — who's a candidate, what it actually costs, how many visits you'll need, and how to choose a clinic you can trust.

Read the full guide →

© 2026 Levana Dental · Bangkok, Thailand · Unsubscribe

A curiosity-gap subject line earns the open. Short by design — the newsletter's job is the click, and the hub does the rest.